Personal impressions: Sarah Stanke

In the morning of the 4th of April, my family and I became very nervous and exited. It was the day, the spanish students from Barcelona arrived in Luckenwalde.
Some days before, there were a lot of questions in my head, that couldn't be answered. For example: "What should I do with him, or, how would be the communication amongst us and with my family?".
Yes, there is still my family.
My parents don't speak English, but they weren't worried about that fact. But I spend a lot of time, thinking about it.
Just one day before the arrival we realized, that we've to take on a big responsibility.

When they came in at the station, the welcome was friendly but the ride home was very, very quiet. No one knew what to say, but when we were home, the mood became better. I showed him around the house and in the evening we met some friends. No one knew what friendship means to me this time. If I don't had have them, I think I would already went down.

On the first days in the presence of him, I was really confused. I'm not used to have one other person than me in our house and it was very heavy to don't take him as a troublemaker. It was very stressful for me, because I'm even not used to do so many things on one day. Usual I come home, sit down on the sofa and do my homework. When he was with me, there was always the question:" What are we going to do now?", on his part. But we always had a plan for every day. Therefore we had some activities in small groups, or even with all the spanish an german students together.

Despite all the stress we had, it was a great experience. We, as relative unknown classmates got together and joined together.

I'm looking forward to meet my new spanish acquaintance in October.
