

A special week

It was a wonderful week with the Spanish students. At first I was very excited. I wanted to see Míriam and all the others. But I was a little bit nervous, too, because I was worried that I maybe would have problems with the language. At the beginning it was very strange and a little bit difficult for me to speak English. Little by little it became easier and in the end I had some problems with the German, so that I spoke with my friends and parents in English or that I couldn't remember what some words, like "completely", mean in German. The best of this week for me was the day in Potsdam and the family day. The day in Berlin was good, too, but the weather was horrible nearly the whole time. My parents were surprised how good it was to speak English and I think for all of our family it was a great experience. We will not forget these days so quickly. The farewell was a little bit hard, but it's good to know that we will see each other once again in March.
